Romulus Lays Off 3 Workers, Announces Program Cuts

Facing a budget shortage of more than $3 million for the coming fiscal year, the City of Romulus has announced the layoff of three employees – one each from the public library, the treasurer's office, and the assessor's office – as well as cuts to several "non-essential" programs popular with residents.

"Romulus is facing the worst budget crisis since the Great Depression, and these tough, unprecedented times require us to make very difficult and painful decisions," said Mayor Alan R. Lambert. "Romulus continues to work hard with all parties to minimize the impact of our budget cuts on important police, fire, and other public services that are important to our families."

According to Lambert, the City has already begun across-the-board cuts to services and projects that will eliminate nearly $1 million in non-payroll costs for the 2010-2011 fiscal year. For instance, a curbside wood-chipping service, previously offered by the Department of Public Works, has been cut to yield an annual savings of $65,000. DPW director Tom Wilson said citizens can still discard tree limbs and branches by cutting them into three-foot lengths and tying them into bundles no more than 50 pounds in weight. The bundles will be removed from the curb by the composting truck on garbage pick-up day.

Also announced were cuts in the City's recreation budget, including elimination of the annual Fourth of July fireworks display and the summer recreation program for youths.

"By cutting the annual fireworks, Romulus will save more than $20,000 a year, including $10,000 in overtime public-safety pay," said Tanya Cofield, interim director of the Parks and Recreation Department.

Cofield also explained that cutting the four- to five-week youth program will save the City at least $9,000 a year.

"While we regret having to make these cuts, the Recreation Department recognizes that we must do our part and share in the sacrifice to help fix our budget crisis," she said.

A New Tree Grows in Taylor

Voters Elect Beard, Thiede to Board of Education; Give Emphatic "No" to Both School Millage Proposals

The landslide defeat of two millage proposals in the recent Romulus Community Schools election, held on May 4, was immensely satisfying to residents upset by everything from the economy to political infighting to plans for redistricting – but others are worried that the district's very existence may now be in jeopardy.

Unofficial results released by the Romulus City Clerk's office showed that the first proposal – a renewal of current operating millage – was turned down by a margin of 1,215 votes to 564, or more than 2 to 1. A second, sinking-fund proposal was rejected 3 to 1 (1,331 to 459).

The same spirit of discontent seemed evident in the race for two Board of Education seats, with incumbent Kenneth Mientkiewicz eliminated after placing third behind Theresa Beard (760 votes), a recent appointee who filled the vacancy created by Celeste Roscoe's election to Romulus City Council last November, and newcomer John Thiede (747). Mientkiewicz garnered 608 votes, followed by Keith B. Miller (446) and Tanya Cofield (416), who announced her withdrawal as a candidate after being selected as interim director for the City's Department of Parks and Recreation.

A total of 1,829 voters – barely 10% of those registered – participated.

Beard and Thiede had plenty of thanks for their supporters.

"I am so appreciative of all the work that was done on my behalf," said Beard. "I am humbled that the members of this community elected me to continue as a representative on the Romulus School Board, and I will do my best to be a voice for them in continuing to make Romulus a great district to educate their children."

Thiede thanked his supporters, as well.

"I would have to credit my successful election bid to the hard-working individuals who worked my campaign," he said. "From knocking doors to working polls, these people gave their all."

"I was endorsed by some key organizations and great people who put their trust in me," he added. "I also credit the voters who came out and cast their ballot for their respective candidate."

When asked for their reactions to the millage votes, both new Board members admitted that it will make their jobs even more challenging.

"This will be a very difficult task with the financial issues in our state and community," Beard stated. "I am disappointed

Letters to the Editor

Romulus Needs Summer Recreation Program

To the Editor:

Again, our kids are ones who have to pay the price because of cutbacks. There is nothing in the City of Romulus for the kids to do but the summer recreation program, and now that is being cut out for this summer. We know that, once a program is cut, it is very difficult to get it back.

The Romulus Athletic Center is only open to kids with adult supervision, and we may lose one Boys & Girls Club. What are our kids to do? Some one needs to step up and say enough is enough. We need to provide some summer rec for the kids. I know state funding is hurting all cities and school districts, but lets stop penalizing the youth. Cut back on a few summer staff members; cut back on City employees driving their cars home. Instead of hiring a part-time program supervisor, use the funds for the program.

As a recreation professional for 30+ years, I know it is so important to provide programs for our future leaders, and help keep our kids coming back to our community when they become adults. This happens when the quality of life in a community provides complete city services.

Former Taylor Councilman Offers Ideas, Help

Dear Taylor City Council Members,

I am writing to share some ideas I have to keep our city afloat financially, while retaining as many employees as possible. The citizens are being bombarded with threats of losing public safety – which, no doubt, puts a great amount of stress on our seniors and others who are dependant on special care. Budget cuts put stress on city employees and their families, as well. The services we provide for our residents are important, and, of course, should be your top priority as elected officials.

I feel that you must work with our employees and come to agreements by which all are willing to work together and help preserve individuals' lifestyles. I feel that the council should meet with our unions and get a feel of what can be done to help solve the problems of the city. The Mayor or his staff meets with them, but I feel there is too much tension at this time to get truthful input.

Here are some of my recommendations:

- Don't replace Police Commander – $125,000
- Allow 4 Sgts to buy out – $400,000 (Sir Cpl command)
- Lt move out of Admin – $120,000 (IT does job)
- Traffic Detail/NO FAC – $1,800,000 (50 slots a week)
- Continue Special Unit – $500,000 (saved 10 jobs in '08)
- Road Patrol/Tickets – $2,160,000 (3 per shift)

It is also a good idea to take a close look at the income totals brought in over the past two years through ALS to make sure you can count on the projected income.

By Ryan McLachlan, Romulus High School senior

In their senior year, students at Romulus High School are required to do a "senior project," which is a detailed research project. Students must identify a social issue, research that issue, make an impact relative to that issue, and learn a new skill concerning the issue. The students must obtain a mentor, or expert in the issue they've chosen. I am very fortunate, and grateful, that Romulus Firefighter Kevin Krause has been my mentor. He has provided me with excellent support and advice on my project.

I have chosen, as my social issue, Sudden Cardiac Death. Sudden Cardiac Death can strike at any age, and claims the lives of nearly 1,000 Americans every day. In many of those cases, death could have been avoided had there been access to an AED (Automated External Defibrillator) and persons trained in its use. My impact goal is to increase availability and awareness of AED devices to hopefully save a life.

In fact, as part of my recent fund-raiser for this effort, we showed a "true life" video of a 16-year-old boy, who, after football practice, suddenly collapsed on the field. His coach immediately began CPR while another player ran to the building to alert staff, who rushed to the scene with the school's AED device (which, coincidentally, is the same brand/model that will be purchased with my donations). Through use of the device, the young man was revived. It turned out that he had a previously unknown heart condition. He can't play football anymore, but stays active with his team.

As part of my project's impact, I conducted a fund-raiser, "Have a Heart for Humor," a comedy show. Romulus resident and Fire Lieutenant John Thiede, along with his comedy troupe "Project 2 Improv," donated their time and exceptional talent for my event. The Metropolitan Hotel donated the use of their main ballroom to host the event. The Romulus community came out strong to support the cause, as more than 200 people came to the show. Sylvan Learning Center in Brownstown donated a $250 certificate for us to auction off that night. In total, $2,735.00 was raised from the event.

On April 5, I presented Romulus Fire Chief David Allison with a check in the amount of $2,235.00, which will fully fund at least one AED unit that will be placed in a public building here in Romulus. I did this with the knowledge that our fire department knows best where this AED will be more useful.

On April 12, I presented the Romulus Community Schools with a check in the amount of $500, which will fully fund their purchase of 12 AED adapter devices that will make their units compatible with the units that the City's rescue personnel use.

The AED devices are so important because of their simplicity to use. Once the unit is opened, it provides audible, step-by-step directions for the user. It instructs when to start/stop CPR, measures the depth of the compressions (to find out if they are deep enough to work), and, if necessary, the machine tells the user to press the "shock" button to deliver a shock to the patient. All the information is stored in the machine, so when medical personnel arrive, they can see exactly what has been happening with the patient.

Again, I would like to thank Lt. John Thiede, the Project 2 Improv troupe, the Sylvan Learning Center, and the Metropolitan Hotel for their generous support of my project. Also, a huge "thank you" to the more than 200 people who came to my event and made it such a success. Finally, another thanks to Firefighter Krause for assisting me. □

Taylor Petting Farm's "Wild Weekend" Featured Exotic Animals

The Heritage Park Petting Farm in Taylor welcomed back the popular Whispering Pines exotic animal show the weekend of May 1-2.

The show featured a number of exciting new animals. Appearing for the first time was an African serval cat – an ancestor of the lion with the common traits of a cheetah.

Everyone also enjoyed the chance to see a wallaroo, which is a blend of a wallaby and kangaroo.

Gia, a female camel, visited along with Gunther, who has always been a show favorite. Camel rides were available for a fee.

A corral of goats, sheep, llamas, and alpacas were on site, ready for petting and photographing.

A menagerie of other animals ranged from a two-toed sloth to a spotted skunk.

Feeding carrots to some of the animals at the Petting Farm were Tricia Elbi and Joseph (left), Parker (right), and Dave (back) Gannon of Taylor. Photos by Dave Gorgon/City of Taylor Reptiles could be seen in a separate exhibit on the farm grounds.

Opportunities abounded for visitors of all ages to learn about life on the "wild" side from the experts who take care of these beautiful creatures.

Still other attractions included face-painting by "Flutterby Faces," who was on hand to turn children into exotic creatures for an additional fee.

Free coloring sheets were also available for children to make in the classroom.

The Heritage Park Petting Farm is located on the northeast corner of Northline and Pardee roads. Admission rates are $3 for Taylor residents, $4 for nonresidents. Children 1 and under are admitted free.

For further information about the farm and its various programs, call 734-374-5946 or visit CityOfTaylor.com. □

Of the cuts announced to date, the elimination of the youth recreation program seems to be the one that has upset residents the most. Several attended the May 3 Council meeting to urge the City to reconsider, noting that working parents depend on the program as an affordable alternative to child care when school is out, and that there are few other options that keep youths off the streets in a safe, supervised environment.

Again acknowledging the difficult decisions involved in trimming the budget,

Mayor Lambert assured everyone that he will continue to examine possible alternatives to the proposed recreation cuts, and said he welcomed residents' ideas on ways to save the programs while still cutting costs.

Lambert also said that the City's administration is prepared to share in the sacrifices being asked of City workers and residents. He and his department heads and appointed employees are taking a five-percent pay cut and benefit changes, and the City's other elected officials have agreed to a five-percent pay cut, as well. □ that our ballot proposals did not pass, and feel that the community did not understand that these proposals were tax neutral.

"Board of Education members are also taxpayers, and we have done our best to curtail costs and protect our community's interest," she continued. "You can be assured that we will continue to do our best for our students, staff, and community."

Thiede said he was surprised by the overwhelming margin of defeat.

"I actually thought it would be a closer margin one way or the other," he explained. "There was so much controversy on the proposals. I saw different literature that possibly misinformed the voters on both sides. I think maybe the defeat of the millage may have been the wording. There has to be a specific number you shoot for, and not write it where it looks like an open checkbook. I did support it. Those who didn't – I respect their vote. These are trying times, and some people are in a better way than others in our community. Everyone has a reason why they vote yes or no."

"Since I am just getting on the School Board, I will get a closer look at the process of things. If the millage is proposed again, we should look at forming focus groups and getting individuals of both sides (yes and no voters), and come to a median where we can all make it a success."

Board Trustee Robert McLachlan, who was elected last year, agrees that it was more than just a bad economy that caused voters to nix the millages, and says the district must work hard to change naysayers' minds.

"Before we take the [millage proposals] back to the voters, we must show that we have done everything within our control to reduce expenses," he stated. "We're not there yet. We need to make sure our business is conducted openly – and, by that, I mean at Board meetings. ... The public will better understand (and trust) decisions when they are fully debated in open meetings, not in sidebars with administrators or committees."

"With that said, it is imperative that this millage be brought back to the voters for approval. We simply cannot function with a 37% hole in our funding. As a board, we have not had a chance to discuss the possible consequences of not having this operating millage, but common sense tells me that more elementary schools would close, forcing those children to attend school in shifts; the middle school may close, forcing the high school into shifts to accommodate the middle school program; and transportation, athletics, and extracurricular items would lose funding."

"Those aren't stated by me as facts or threats," he added. "They are just, in my opinion, last-option scenarios that we, as a community, may be forced into." □

Clean Sweep To Feature Tree Dedication

The City of Romulus is seeking volunteers for Operation Clean Sweep, an annual cleanup program that will be held on Saturday, May 15.

The program will begin at 9 a.m. with the ceremonial planting of a Liberty Tree at the Romulus Veterans Memorial, located on Wayne Road south of Goddard, in front of the Public Library. The tree was obtained by the Downtown Development Authority, which applied for a grant from the Elm Research Institute in January. The City has invited Eagle Scouts and members of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars to be special guests at the ceremony.

Afterward, all Clean Sweep participants are invited to meet at the Romulus Senior Center at 9:30 a.m. to fortify themselves with bagels, donuts, and coffee before picking up assignments, rubbish bags, and gloves, or spending part of the day cleaning up areas in and around their own neighborhood.

At 1 p.m., the new Senior Community Garden – located at Bibbins and Sterling streets – will be dedicated, and pictures will be taken of the senior citizens who have signed up to plant and tend the garden's 10 raised beds.

All events are free and open to the public.

For information, call Mayor Alan Lambert's office: 734-942-7571. □
